wall mirror 2015

The common object that comes into daily contact with the local Singaporean is often the inconspicuous mirror. Be it starting a good day or ending a great night, the humble mirror serves as not just a reflection of the person's outlook but also a platform to embrace the changes along the day in either the bathroom or bedroom. GÅNGJÄRN stems from the concept of strictly being a mirror; removing the bulky storage people would associate with wall mirrors. Riding on that philosophy, GÅNGJÄRN offers a flexible, temporary storage for clothing and towels via the hinged arm and another similar space for metallic knick knacks such as keys, etc. Got a hook? No worries, throw it on and see how the magnetic beam of GÅNGJÄRN holds the load. Being slim has got nothing to do with poor storage.
